Required reading for adults

By Charles J. McMahon

This should be required reading for anyone who wants to break from the fantasy of being taken care of (by god, by religion, by another human being, by the government, yadda yadda yadda) and learn to take care of him/herself. Give up the fantasy -- reality is enough.

Read If You Want to be Depressed

By Pinks

This is a very depressing book. I would not recommend it to anyone. I'm not sure why it was recommended to me.

Painfully thought provoking...intense.

By M. Belle

This is a MUST READ for current and future therapists.

An End to Innocence is for those who love to ask "why", the introspective, and anyone who wants to grow. If you are looking for a feel good read, wanting to escape reality in some way, or are looking for some sort of validation in relation to either, this may not be the best read for you.

An End to Innocence encouraged me to look within, and ironically, in some ways, to stop looking within (at least not so hard).

Realizing that there is no inherent meaning in life, and that it must be created on your own, is both lonely and scary, but enlightening beyond any words I could write here.
