Works great with multi-ages

By healthnut

This is brilliant. It can be used to start learning any language, and with kids of all ages together.

It worked great with my grandkids and friends children (a group of 7 kids ages 2-7).

And I learned too, almost as fast as they did.

I like that the lessons include lots of physical and other activities and focus on practical everyday words and situations.

Our language helper knew some English, which helped. After 20 lessons, I felt like I had learned the methodology and could to continue adding more lessons focusing on new topics of interest.

I did not need to know the foreign language, we learned together.

I got this before it was available on Amazon and I was one of those who tried it out pre-publication.

Now I recommend it to every family or small group wanting to learn how to learn a language together.

Best Language Lessons for Kids

By snailvine

My Third Culture Kid friend told me the biggest regret of his TCK life was that he had not learned a second language. He felt this was the greatest travesty of his childhood. (He made up for it as an adult by learning Mandarin.)

Having worked with cross cultural families for over 15 years, I know that children learning language is a major stressor. For both parents and children. Kids don't just pick up a second language. They need to have help along the way. This book is that help! Once you have read it and internalized the principles for children's language learning, you can just follow the easy directions and shepherd your children into the experience of knowing more than one language.

I'm currently using this with my own children and a few other families. We're doing the second lesson today. Our language helper is excited that she can teach kids (by doing the activities outlined in this book) and the children are excited to succeed in a new language.

I applaud Christine and Alyssa for thoughtfully crafting lessons that are developmentally appropriate for kids and don't put high pressure on them to perform. When language learning is fun, kids are motivated.
