Truth of hearts!

By Gail Mitchell

Truth! I love this man and miss him dearly. He died on Dec 8, 2015 after a long bout with cancer. I first read about John Trudell in a SF newspaper in 1992. I got to see him live at a music venue in SF that same year. I was blown away by his "lines" as he called them. Poetry with a live band and a Native American traditional singer backing him made his "lines" all the more poignant. I will treasure each and every poem and remember how lucky I am that his "lines" found me and kept me coherent. I think everyone should seek out John Trudell, read his work, listen to his music and check out Thunderheart. He was one of a kind and a survivor, of all the worst thing that can happen to a man. Still he reached inside and gave of himself, offering his "lines" to help us see. I was lucky enough to meet him and see him perform many times.

Poetry from an activist who has sacrificed much and still sings.

By Miroku Nemeth

Those who know something about John Trudell the Santee Sioux activist who was a leader for the the All Indian takeover of Alcatraz and chairman of the American Indian Movement (AIM), probably also know something of Trudell's poetry. This collection has poetry collected over the decades--some of it protesting the rapacious materialism, for example, of the Reagan years, some of it talking about Bush and the wars "against terror" in Iraq and Afghanistan. He offers the deeply rooted perspective of an authentic "human being", and a man who has seen true hardship, struggle, and loss in his life. But his political poetry is not, actually, what drew me to this collection. It was his love poetry and his poetry that spoke of life in a way I think all of us can understand. There is much in this collection for everyone who would listen to the songs of our humanity.

See the Woman

She has a young face
An old face
She carries herself well
In all ages
She survives all man has done

In some tribes she is free
In some religions
She is under man
In some societies
She's worth what she consumes

In some nations
She is delicate strength
In some states
She is told she is weak
In some classes
She is property owned

In all instances
She is sister to earth
In all conditions
She is life bringer
In all life she is our necessity

See the woman eyes
Flowers swaying
On scattered hills
Sundancing calling in the bees

See the woman heart
Lavender butterflies
Fronting blue sky
Misty rain falling
On soft wild roses

See the woman beauty
Lightning streaking
Dark summer nights
Forests of pines mating
With new winter snow

See the woman spirit
Daily serving courage
With laughter
Her breath a dream
And a prayer

John Trudell "See the Woman"

I read an article about a woman
A woman living in the war
In Central America
A woman lost her family
A woman the only survivor
A woman goes to sleep one night
A woman waking up
A woman not a mother anymore anymore
A woman held on she could not scream
A woman not submitting to the enemy
A woman praying for women
On the other side
A woman rebuilding her life
A woman in the Middle East
A woman in Europe
A woman in Africa
A woman in Asia
A woman in North America
A woman in different situations
A woman all the same
A woman pays for man's war

John Trudell "About a Woman"

She's not guilty not guilty not guilty
She's a rosebush
Treat her beauty gently
Sweet love her fragrance without thorns
Don't hurt her don't chop her down
She can't live as decoration in a vase
She needs to continue
Continue to bloom continue to bloom

John Trudell "Restless Situations"

True indigenous anger contained in an understanding soul

By John T Greeley

John Trudell does not attain the wide readership or literary praise he deserves. A major American voice in poetry, not just Native American poetry, Trudell has the soul, spirit and understanding of the hardships and the joys of modern indigenous people

A former leader of the American Indian Movement, he has not lost his intensity but tempered it with brilliant insights that are universal.

The power of the language and imagery in Crazy Horse and Look At Us will leave you breathless. Find the CD or DVD with these two masterpieces read by a master of live poetry and you might hear the ultimate beauty of a master of his craft .

John Trudell lives the Spirit of Crazy Horse.
