Classic yet Current

By Clay Blackmore

Have you ever wanted to be the assistant to a Master Photographer? Take the time and study Kelly's latest book, Portrait Mastery in Black and White, where you will take a passionate journey into the artist's studio, his head, and his heart, learning how to think like one of the most accomplished photographers working in the industry today.

Kelly's portraits are simple, direct; yet make powerful statements, putting aside the overstuffed manner of so much celebrated photography seen in today's digital color portraiture. He likes to work like a painter against neutral backgrounds or simple window light locations with minimal equipment, while he achieves a brilliant encounter with his subjects with relaxed poses creating his signature style.

Kelly is also a consummate darkroom craftsmen and digital artist. His multiple awards, and impressive clientele are not only from his intensity in the camera room, they are a result of his vision and preparation behind his camera and in the postproduction efforts that are transparent to the viewer on the final print.

The portraits are all clearly explained and accompanied with useful lighting diagrams. Posing and Lighting, tonal values, exposure control, lens selection, background choices, style, and the psychology of the lens, are explained in this very informative and eye opening publication on the black and white portraiture.

Tim Kelly is a leader in the photography industry - not only for his stunning and impeccable black and white portrait work, but in business, marketing and sales. I was fortunate to be directed to Tim Kelly's work in the beginning of my own portrait career almost 20 years ago, and I learn from him every time I hear him teach, and now with his Portrait Mastery book. I love the stories and delivery that Tim gives to each of the portraits presented in the book. It keeps the book interesting along with the technical lighting instruction.

This book should be on every portrait photographers shelf to go back to again and again.
